

ABSTRACT

Performance matching devices in SOI are improved by thermally isolating matched devices within a continuous body of active material. Matched devices are isolated by an insulating wall of silicon dioxide 5 (which surrounds the devices) and the oxide layer beneath, and are arranged to minimize effects from external thermal sources.